China is a land of superlatives and contradictions. The world's largest country by population, China has the world's longest wall—visible from outer space. It has a magnetic levitation train that runs at over 400km/hour. China has several mega-cities, the largest having a population of over 30 million, and is the world's largest consumer of coal, oil, and steel. In other words, China is a country in a hurry.
