Many audits had to be postponed or performed remotely in recent months because of the COVID-19 pandemic. Of course, we have many technical tools at our disposal that allow us to communicate across distances, which should help make these virtual audits as realistic as an on-site audit. That is true to some extent, but there are still many aspects of an audit that simply cannot, or at least not easily, be covered remotely. Today we will discuss the complexities in supply chain management, the expectations for a GDP audit, and deficiencies in distribution processes with our guest Siegfried Schmitt.
